Introduction

About the Conference

The Southwest School Safety Summit, presented by NCPVCV, is designed to move the conversation beyond compliance and into meaningful, measurable impact. This conference brings together leading voices in school safety to focus on what actually works: behavior-based strategies, prevention frameworks, and the community factors that directly influence the safety and well-being of our schools.

At its core, this summit is about shifting from perceived safety to true risk mitigation. Attendees will engage in practical, evidence-informed discussions around prevention, response, and the implementation of programs that create safer, more connected school environments. From behavioral threat assessment to community engagement strategies, participants will leave with tools they can immediately apply.

We are proud to feature a knock-it-out-of-the-park lineup of nationally recognized experts and practitioners. Our keynote speaker, Dr. John Hodge, is joined by an exceptional group of presenters, including Dr. Ken Trump, Bobby Kipper, Chief Jerald Monahan, Shequan Palmer, and Wendy Davison. Each brings deep expertise and real-world application to the work of school safety.

This summit is intentionally designed for a broad audience, including K-12 educational leaders, school resource officers, teachers, and community members. School safety is not the responsibility of one role; it is a shared commitment, and this event reflects that reality.

The Role of Our Sponsors

This work is only possible with the support of our sponsors. Your investment helps keep registration costs accessible for schools, more than 50% less expensive than other statewide or regional safety conferences, while ensuring attendees receive high-quality, personalized professional development. More importantly, it allows us to expand the reach of this work, equipping more educators, officers, and community members with the tools needed to create safer schools.

About Us

The National Center for the Prevention of Community Violence (NCPCV) is a mission-driven organization dedicated to advancing practical, evidence-informed strategies that reduce violence and strengthen communities. Through a focus on behavior-based safety, prevention science, and human-centered systems, NCPCV works alongside schools, agencies, and community partners to create environments where individuals can thrive.

NCPCV's work is grounded in the belief that violence is preventable. By addressing the behavioral, environmental, and social factors that influence risk, the organization helps shift communities from reactive responses to proactive, sustainable prevention efforts. This includes the development and implementation of programs that emphasize early identification, intervention, and the cultivation of positive, connected cultures.

A core area of focus for NCPCV is school safety. Through initiatives such as behavior-based safety frameworks, educator and staff training, and community engagement strategies, NCPCV equips schools with tools that go beyond compliance and lead to measurable impact. This approach integrates prevention and preparedness, ensuring that schools are not only ready to respond to emergencies, but are actively working to reduce the likelihood of those events occurring in the first place.

NCPCV collaborates with nationally recognized experts, practitioners, and local leaders to deliver high-quality training, resources, and events that are both practical and scalable. From classrooms to communities, the organization is committed to building safer environments through education, partnership, and action.

About The Event

The Southwest School Safety Summit is a two-day, high-impact conference focused on advancing preventative school safety frameworks and meaningful community engagement. This event brings together nationally renowned experts to share practical strategies that move schools beyond compliance and toward true risk mitigation.

Attendees will engage in sessions centered on behavioral threat assessment, prevention-based systems, and real-world applications that strengthen both school culture and safety outcomes. Designed for educators, school resource officers, and community stakeholders, the summit emphasizes a shared responsibility in creating safer school environments.

In addition to dynamic learning experiences, the event includes intentional opportunities for sponsor engagement, allowing for meaningful connection with participants and alignment with organizations committed to school safety.

Event Highlight

Direct access to K-12 leaders, school resource officers, and community stakeholders

Prominent brand visibility

Alignment with prevention-focused initiatives for schools

Dedicated opportunities to connect, build relationships, and position your organization as a leader in school safety

Event Schedule

Leadership & Connection

Kick off the summit with a powerful keynote address from Dr. John Hodges, setting the stage for a prevention-focused approach to school safety. The day will feature expert-led presentations on behavior-based frameworks, along with intentional, structured time to engage with sponsors and explore solutions that support your school community. The evening concludes with a cocktail reception, creating space for meaningful networking and collaboration among attendees, speakers, and partners.

Implementation, Programs & Impact

Day two is focused on practical application and real-world implementation. Attendees will continue with high-impact presentations and dedicated sponsor engagement opportunities, while also being introduced to NCPCV's flagship initiatives: The Green Zone and Ollie the Owl Youth Safety Program. These programs provide scalable, behavior-based tools designed to support prevention, strengthen school culture, and extend safety practices beyond the classroom and into the community.

Benefits for Sponsor

Sponsoring the Southwest School Safety Summit positions your organization at the intersection of impact, influence, and community leadership. It's more than visibility, it's an opportunity to support prevention-driven work while building trusted relationships with K-12 decision-makers.

Strategic Visibility

Your organization will be prominently featured throughout the summit, placing your brand alongside nationally recognized leaders in school safety. This visibility reinforces your commitment to community well-being and positions you as a trusted partner in prevention-focused initiatives.

Direct Access & Relationship Building

Engage directly with school leaders, educators, school resource officers, and community stakeholders in a setting designed for meaningful interaction. Dedicated sponsor time ensures opportunities to build authentic relationships, not just brief introductions.

Alignment with High-Impact Work

Demonstrate your organization's commitment to solutions that matter. By supporting this summit, you are investing in scalable, behavior-based strategies that help schools move beyond compliance and toward measurable, real-world impact.
