

Steve Irwin Bio

In 1991, I retired from the Army and attempted new adventures, but found little awaited me. However, I understood how important education was to individuals and our society, and so began my education journey. Now, I am the product of the community college system, and see the successes I have achieved because of its foundation.

Additionally, I have been a public servant on the federal, state, and local government's level for 24 years. My work has entailed aiding families in AHCCCSA Long Term Care programs & Juvenile Probation Department; and educating students at Yavapai College. While in public service, I developed an understanding on how government can better serve taxpayers and our community.

Now, as a successful owner and founder of Arizona Prime Real Estate, I live every day emphasizing the importance of staying within a budget and maximizing resources, as well as investing in the people who make businesses flourish. As a Yavapai College Governing Board Member, I bring my life experience to an organization that has a tremendous economic and social impact on Yavapai County residents
